RAVINIA FESTIVAL AND WFMT CLASSICAL RADIO EXTEND BROADCAST SERIES WITH BRAND-NEW CONCERTS

Eight-concert series kicks off on January 21 with concert performances ranging from solos and duos to small ensembles, including Elgin Symphony Orchestra and Highland Park Strings members.

Series to air on WFMT, wfmt.com, and the WFMT app Thursdays at 8:00 p.m.

HIGHLAND PARK, IL — Ravinia Festival today announced the extension of its “New from the Ravinia Festival” concert broadcasts with WFMT classical radio. From January 21 to March 11, the series will bring fans new concert recordings from the festival every Thursday at 8:00 p.m. CST on 98.7 WFMT and streaming on wfmt.com and the WFMT app.

“We are thrilled to be working with our WFMT friends once again to bring music from Ravinia to listeners at home,” said Ravinia President and CEO Jeff Haydon. “In addition, we are grateful to dedicate these broadcasts in memory of Stephen Smoot, a longtime Ravinia staff member and collaborator with WFMT who recently passed unexpectedly.”

The series is composed of eight 45-minute concerts recorded in Ravinia’s Bennett Gordon Hall and is dedicated to Stephen Smoot, the festival’s longtime Artistic Producer who coordinated the broadcasts of many Ravinia concerts on WFMT before his passing late last year. Pianist Claire Huangci is featured when the series kicks off January 21, performing Beethoven’s “Pastoral” Symphony in a transcription by Liszt, as well as Bach, Chopin, and Brahms works. The Cavani String Quartet will follow on January 28 with Charles Washington’s Midnight Child and Eric Gould’s He Speaks in Shadows (In Memory of John Coltrane), plus Beethoven’s last quartet.

Beethoven highlights continue on February 4 with cellist Oliver Herbert and pianist Xiaohui Yang playing the composer’s first and last cello sonatas, and on March 4 Daniela Liebman headlines with his penultimate piano sonata in addition to Chopin’s Fourth Ballade and the final collection of piano pieces by Brahms. On February 11, pianist Dominic Cheli will perform Carl Vine’s Sonata No. 1 and Schulhoff’s Suite No. 3 for the Left Hand, his own arrangement of Beethoven’s song An die Hoffnung, and works by H. Leslie Adams, Clara Schumann, and Couperin.

Violinist Andrew Sords pairs up with pianist Daniel Overly for a February 18 broadcast featuring Franck’s Violin Sonata and Bloch’s Baal Shem suite, as well as Brahms’s Sonatensatz and Kreisler’s take on a dance from Falla’s La vida breve. Capping the month, soprano Nicole Heaston will be joined by members of the Elgin Symphony Orchestra for Jessie Montgomery’s I Want to Go Home and songs by Liszt, Schubert, Purcell, and Handel on the February 25 broadcast. Violinist Maya Anjali Buchanan will close the series on March 11 with the Highland Park Strings, playing “Winter” from The Four Seasons in both Vivaldi’s original guise and Piazzolla’s Argentine tango twist; the ensemble will also perform Mozart’s K. 136 Divertimento and Elgar’s Serenade for Strings.

“WFMT is thrilled to bring back ‘New from the Ravinia Festival,’ ” said George Preston, General Manager of WFMT. “We had such a positive response last year and are certain this outstanding lineup of artists will present incredible music to our audience.”
